Cadorath Aerospace announces more than 100 new Bell engineering repairs

Winnipeg, Canada – Cadorath Aerospace announced today that it developed 123 new Bell engineering repairs in 2011, giving Cadorath the fastest growing list of Bell and Rolls Royce rework capabilities in the industry. The Cadorath design and engineering department has developed more than 600 approved repairs for the Bell line to date.

“Cadorath Aerospace has expanded on the Bell 206B, 206L, 407, 204, 205, 212 and 412 rework lines,” says Cadorath President and CEO Gerry Cadorath. “We are a global leader in the repair, modification and overhaul of aeronautical products. This fulfils, in part, a promise we made to our customers to continue to expand our product offerings. We fully expect to unveil additional product lines for the Bell series aircraft in 2012. This organic growth has been planned very carefully with input from our customers – they talked, we listened, and then we acted on their suggestions.”

With its Bell Technical Support Team serving as liaison between customers and the engineering division, Cadorath continues to act on its commitment to improve the customer experience.

“We started this endeavor to enhance our already established Bell Rework Capabilities. We now offer Bell rework out of our Lafayette, Louisiana facility. Because we have two locations in North America, we feel our service levels are deeper and more comprehensive than the other options in the marketplace”.

Cadorath Aerospace has been an authorized Rolls Royce repair facility since 1999, and – after performing tens of thousands of repairs with millions of proven flight hours – Cadorath is recognized as a global parts repair leader.
